Read Across America

David Weir Elementary School second graders raise their hands to get a free book as part of their school's Read Across America program Monday morning. Students at Armijo High School and other volunteers read to students and distributed books for kids in kindergarten through third grade. About 800 books were provided by the local non-profit, My Own Book, and distributed to students at David Weir and Anna Kyle elementary schools. Read Across America is an annual, nationwide event that corresponds with Dr. Seuss' birthday and promotes literacy in school children.
